A Most Valuable Agent.

The glycerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts from native medicinal roots and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and antiferment. It adds greatly to the efficacy of the Black Cherrybark, Bloodroot, Golden Seal root, Stone root and Queen's root, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery," in subduing chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchitis, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities.

In all cases where there is a wasting away of flesh, loss of appetite, with weak stomach, as in the early stages of consumption, there can be no doubt that glycerine acts as a valuable nutritive and aids the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Queen's root and Black Cherrybark in promoting digestion and building up the flesh and strength, controlling the cough and bringing about a healthy condition of the whole system. Of course, it must not be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption except in its earlier stages. It will cure, however, the lingering coughs, or those of long standing, even when accompanied by bleeding from lungs, that it has performed its most marvelous cures.

Prof. Emily Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Med. College, Chicago, says of glycerine: "In dyspepsia it serves an excellent purpose. Holding a fixed quantity of the peroxide of hydrogen in solution, it is one of the best manufactured products of the present time in its action upon indigestion, disordered stomachs, especially if there is ulceration or catarrhal gastritis (catarrhal inflammation of stomach). It is a most efficient preparation. Glycerine will relieve many cases of pyrosis (heartburn) and excessive gastric (stomach) acidity."

Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet telling all about the native medicinal roots composing this wonderful medicine. There is no alcohol in it.

THE OLD LEEBURG PIKE.

A special despatch to the New York Herald from Winchester, dated Tuesday, says: Through one of the most beautiful and one of the most historic sections of Virginia the scout cars of the New York Herald and the Atlanta Journal passed today on their way from the national capital to Winchester, Va. The route lay through Fairfax, Loudoun and Clarke counties. In the delightful character of the scenery and in the generous hospitality extended today's run was one of the most enjoyable which the good roads champions have experienced.

Departing from Washington, the scout cars ran over the old Georgetown Pike and then over the Alexandria and Leesburg roads, both of which were given a solid foundation of rock ballasting something more than a century ago. The rock bottom of these old State pikes is as firm today as ever, but the top dressing has long ago been washed out and years of neglect have left the roads dry but extremely rough.

Probably the worst part of the old pike is the stretch between Dranesville and Leesburg, but John Guthrie Hopkins, a wealthy resident who has recently purchased an estate of 4,000 acres near Dranesville, has become so interested in the good roads movement that he stands ready to cover his personal fortune a dollar of his own for every dollar raised from other sources in the effort to redeem the once fine old highway connecting Washington with the Shenandoah Valley. The counties traversed today include the historic homes of many of the first families of Virginia, such as the Washingtons, the Lees, the Fairfaxes, and other names inseparably connected with colonial, revolutionary and civil war times. It was in this same charming section of the Old Dominion that Thackeray laid many of the scenes of his novels "The Newcomes" and "The Virginians."

Not far from Dranesville the scouts met a fox hunter surrounded by his handsome pack of dogs, which reminded them that this is one of the most famous hunting sections of the South. The hunter, Samuel L. Jenkins, a well known farmer, halted his pack in front of the automobile long enough to be photographed.

This part of Virginia is anxious for the establishment of a modern highway from Washington, not only because of the aid to agriculture, but because the Loudoun Valley has become a fashionable country suburb of the national capital. The beautiful rolling country stretching south from Leesburg is known as the best fox hunting ground in America.

The absence of a first class highway to Washington is the one thing lacking to make the Loudoun Valley to Washington what the Green Spring Valley is to Baltimore and Long Island to New York.

There are probably few Americans who now recall the fact that this fine old Virginia town enjoyed the brief distinction of serving as the national capital during the war of 1812, when the British troops for a short time occupied Washington.

In the Leesburg Inn the scouts were entertained at dinner as the guests of Mayor Garrett and other gentlemen, Charles H. Janney acting as toastmaster. The mayor, in a hearty address, welcomed the good roads pilgrims to Leesburg.

The escorting cars accompanied the scouts several miles out of town when the departure from Leesburg was made at ten minutes before three o'clock, after a stop of more than two hours, every minute of which was delightfully passed.

From Leesburg to Bluemont the road is fine. It lies through the beautiful Loudoun Valley, which was the path of many a war time raid by Mosby's famous guerrillas, who often forced their cavalry dashes almost to the boundaries of the national capital. Bluemont is the terminal of a branch of the Southern Railway and lies at the mouth of Sailer's Gap, a picturesque notch in Blue Ridge.

After a steady climb up grade the scouts reached the beautiful estate of four thousand acres known as White Hall, which is the valley home of Col. James Hooe, a Washington lawyer, who passes his summers there in one of Virginia's most beautiful spots. In a charming house, the rooms of which are graced by the portraits of many men famous in statesmanship, journalism, literature and art, whom Colonel Hooe has numbered among his friends.

40,000 FOR STATE.

The state of Virginia has received $40,000 from the United States government, proceeds of the sales of public lands, the amount received representing the share allotted to the State. The money is to be used for the agricultural schools of the state. O. Lee Moore, clerk to the auditor of public accounts, said yesterday that under the laws of the state two-thirds would go to the Virginia Polytechnic Institute Blacksburg, and that one-third would go to the Hampton Normal and Industrial Institute. Last year the state received $85,000 from the same source.
